

measures will be presented to the Assembly. It is like they are playing in a volleyball field, hoping that oil prices will stay up so everyone can relax!

They act as if corrective measures are only related to budget deficits, while corrective measures are really needed to cure this crisis of thought and planning. Employees who do not perform their jobs with sincerity and do not take care of their country is the crisis. They are unproductive, uncreative, and corrupt. Above all that, they get high salaries and generous benefits with the support of civil service. When a minister terminates the services of an undersecretary, the administrative court will just put him back in office. If someone gets promoted, his predecessor ends up getting reappointed even if he never showed up for work! When the office is filled by the most qualified, and when the minister is capable of changing and upgrading his staff, and when the presence of a strong government prevents the minister from abusing his position, only then we will free ourselves from the bottleneck.

Criticism is an easy thing. As they say, the one who is beaten by a stick doesn't stand in the same spot as the one who counts the strokes. God be with us and our government. If our government would allow us to make a suggestion. Before responding with more complicated bureaucracy, let's appoint one of the ministers to head a crisis response team to clearly define and communicate the government's agenda to the people.
