

of one of the deputies was that the purpose of transferring profits was to ensure distribution of profits for future minors. Regardless, he went on to explain, the funds were invested under PAMA's name which meant the money belonged to the authority and not the minors. What a strange answer! To simplify the matter for him, I explained Robin Hood's theory of stealing from the rich to give to the poor. Yes, the intention sounds right but the act itself is wrong. And that is exactly what was being done by the Authority. It held onto the profits which belonged to current minors in order to distribute profits for the minors to come. Moreover, the fact that the investments are in the name of the Authority does not mean in any way that it owns it. The Authority is the representative of the minors. The deputy didn't necessarily like what I had to say, and so began an age-old dispute. The snowball grew and the fund grew inflated with the money of minors who were left without receiving their full rights. This system persisted and controlled the institution's mentality. Since then, I continued reaching out to every Minister of Justice to stop the injustice against the minors and orphans of Kuwait. One of the strangest responses I received was from one of the committed ministers. "You are correct," he told me, "but please don't get me involved in a 300 million dinar problem while I am holding this position." He was afraid of losing his title, but he did not fear God. Now his time is over, but the trampled rights of thousands of orphans will follow him until the day of judgement.
