

stock market in the 1980's and the complications that followed. He was always optimistic regardless of what was going on and what would happen. His main concern was about his daughters being able to continue their studies in Switzerland and Ireland. I am so happy to see his daughter achieving great success in the world of medicine, as well as charitable work in our community. This model for our children is what the country demands. I think that Abdulaziz's greatest pride is that he is the father of Dr. Elham Al Hamdan.

This year, The Promenade will be sponsoring the Run Kuwait event which will provide medical care for children with special needs, in addition to encouraging the community towards a healthy and active lifestyle. I personally like the marketing policy for this mall which brings together marketing and charitable work, hitting two birds with one stone. Such activities provide wide media and marketing coverage, while at the same time the financial returns from the sponsorships of companies and malls will go to charity. We hope to see more non-profit organizations that direct their income towards badly needed community service programs. We also hope to see more sponsorships and contributions towards these kinds of sporting events since this country and its people deserve the best. I would like to extend my thanks to Fawzia Sultan Rehabilitation Institute, The Promenade, to all participating organization, to all the participants in the race, and of course to the staff who made it happen. Congratulations in advance to the winners!
