

upgrades to infrastructure made things worse. We as citizens also bear a large part of the responsibility. For example, some of us showed themselves to be most innovative when it came finding ways of violating the law, and started to rent rooms to marginal laborers among family neighborhoods without caring about their neighbors. All of this has resulted in a great chaos of construction and traffic, so we cannot let others carry the blame of our own mistakes. Furthermore, if we talked about the demographic structure, that is also the creation of our own hands, because the problem lays in us spending the last twenty years falling behind in the development of the country, and then suddenly we begin to build new cities, start infrastructure and industrial projects that costs billions all at the same time. This will inevitably result in an even greater increase in the number of foreigners because who is going to build and operate these projects? Can anybody explain that to me?! Of course, I won't even begin to talk about the trade of residencies and commercial licenses because there's just no use.

All that is left to say is welcome our foreign brothers, and thanks to God, Kuwait is still one of the safest cities in the world. From my part, I would like to participate and tell my mandoob, Zainhom, thank you and get better soon. To my employees Roy, Fadel, Refat, Ayman, Alaa, Mohammed; my driver, Mony, and all the workers in my house; the trustworthy engineer Majdi al-Qahdi, and the creative architect Bassam al-Hajj. To all of you, thank you so much. These are people who have worked with me for more than thirty years and I've only seen the good from them.
