

Tell me how? Personally, I would love to see my country flourish at the hands of her own people, but the State continues to build hospitals, airports, new cities with housing for 120,000 families, and on top of that, there's this Silk City dream. Ok then, in your opinion, how many Kuwaitis would these projects employ as drivers, plumbers, and janitors? Are those the professions you expect the Kuwaiti workforce to occupy? Or do they belong to the "rare professions" you want to exclude? What will you do with half a million servants? And seriously, how do you want the government to impose taxes on them? The government isn't even capable of collecting the electricity fees, so how do you think it's going to collect taxes? Or how about we impose the taxes on each mother who abandons her children with the maids?!

As for the unnecessary laborers in the streets, it's not too difficult to figure out who brought them here and made a trade out of residencies and livelihoods like they were commodities, but no legal action has been taken against the residency merchants. Fighting this plague does not need new legislation, it needs an interrogation of the Minister Social Affairs and Labor. Let her expose the names of this trade's makers!

My brothers, allow me to say that you have missed the right thing. Those expatriates are our brothers, our friends, and our guests! It should be our priority as Kuwaitis to change our own lifestyles; to be faithful in our jobs and to earn our wages so they don't become a burden on our government! Forget about Trump and his ideas, and pay attention to your poor country.

Besides, this kind of divisive rhetoric doesn't work with the people of Kuwait.
