

Chapter Seven: Crisis of Thought!

"From crisis to crisis." This is the situation of the Kuwaiti people over the past years and until today. Whenever I read the newspapers or posts on social media, or when I hear people of Kuwait talking in diwaniya, there is always a mood of anxiety. If we remove the cloud of anxiety and look deep at the situation, however, we will see that Kuwait is not really living in a crisis, praise be to God. If we compare our situation with the countries surrounding us, we will observe the pressures of people suffering the scourge of sectarianism, wars, divisions, mass migrations, and other urgent issues which are causing difficult economic conditions.

Just because there is no "real crisis" does not mean there is no crisis at all, however. The crisis that Kuwait suffers from is a crisis of thought. The State, represented by